Ladies suffering from nervous afflictions find quick relief in PARKER'S GINGER TONIC. PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM aids the hair growth. Nicholson's Liquid Bread is a truthful temperance tonte. It builds up the constitution on scientific principles, assimilating with the food and making pure blood. Try it. Grocers and druggists keep it.

Lord & Taylor.

There's no patent on making good clothing, and we do not pretend to have a monopoly of the business. There are several other first-class makers in this city, perhaps two or three at most, but the bulk of the ready-made clothing sold is not as good as it might or should be.

There is less actual percentage of profit in really good clothing than in the poorer sort; because good cloth, trimmings and tailoring cost more than poor, while the similarity between good and poor compels the best maker to keep in view the possible comparison of his garments with others gotten up to look about as well. Thus the temptation comes to do indifferent work. There's more quick profit in it. Only in the long run does the less showy but more substantial product gain ground.

We are in the trade for a lifetime and are doing our work so faithfully that we expect to reap returns for many years to come. Our rightly-made Fall Suits and
